He Shows His Old-Time Magic Stroke and Scores 500 to Ives's 401—Maurica Baly Ton Much for George Sutton-If Ives Bowns Slesson Te-Sight There Will He a Triple Tie.

Frank Christian Ives, the young billiard wonder, played the second of the three critical cue battles of the big billiard tourney last night with his old adversary, Jacob Schnefer, in the Madison Square Garden Concert Hall. The fame of Ivea's splendid game on Thursday afternoon with George Sutton, in which he broke two records, the high run and high average, had spread abroad, and there was a great outpouring billiard lovers, in expectation of witnessing another display of his matchices art. There was early an exhibition of seeming feeling between the two, in Ives's challenging of Schaefbalk-line play. It was the first time the men had met since Ives's sickness last spring. when Schrefer was bombarding him with chal-lenges for a championship battle, which, of course, the youngster couldn't heed. It was of interest for the old timers to recall the days when the "young Napoleon" used to study billiards under Schaefer, when the latter America. Ives now has the advantage in youth and marvellous eyesight over his old menter. He has been pretty much over the world since then, winning victories everywhere, and before play began last night he was the undoubt-ed idol of the hour. was the acknowledged master of the cue in before play began last night be was the undoubted idol of the hour.

The halls had been in the hall and on the table for fully half an hour before the game to accustom them to the temperature. I yes opened the game with a miss, something that is generally expected at the start, and schaefer executed 4 cushion carroms. I yes also made 4, tripping on a miscue. He hammered his cue top with a file, and going hack to the table smashed a second "duck egg." The "Wisard" followed suit, and then I yes got the ivories started and began some of his remarkable close plays, of which his draw shots were the most noticeable feature. When the globes slipped from the corner after a time he resorted to some of his famous position drives to keep them under control. He corralled 46, which gave him exactly a half hundred points, Schaefer having 12 on his side of the beard.

points, Schaefer having 12 on his side of the beard.

An unlooked-for kiss stopped Ives's run in an untimely fashion, but the interruntion gave a chance to Schaefer to execute several difficult and beautiful cushion carroins, that were followed up by some delicate straight carroins of artistic design. At this stage he played something like his old self for the first time in the tourney, and his case work was just as expert as was Ives's. On the fittieth carroin Ives jumped up and claimed that his rival had not driven the balls out of balk. There was a share retort from Schaefer, and Referce McLaughlin ended it by deciding in Schaefer's favor. The run ended at 56, and Ives made a solitary carroin in reply.

retort from Schaefer, and Referee McLaughlin ended it by deciding in Schaefer s favor. The run ended at 58, and I ves made a solitary carrom in reply.

This kick on Ives's part turned the popular feeling to Schaefer instantly, and he resumed play later on with lots of encouraging applause from the onlookers. There was a most marvellous change in the "Wizard's" demeanor, and he suddenly developed that magic delicacy of cue touch which was almost entirely absent from his preceding performances in this tourney. He rolled up 20 and 15 very rapidly in two successive bunches, and turned the wire a leader. The board showed this score: Schaefer, 105; Ives, 60.

There was another challenge by Ives against Schaefer on the ground that he had played two shots in balk against the rules. This time there was a long and exciting discussion, and, amid great applause. Schaefer again and rightfully received the referee's decision. The referee delared that his own failure to wall a warning to Schaefer should not operate against the player. The hubbub disconcerted Schaefer and he stopped short after scoring 8 singles. Ives chewed gum furiously during the hot debate, and he slashed the globes around when it came his turn. The effort netted 27, and the youngster then cracked a "duck egg." He was not until the thirteenth inning that Ives swung round his first wire, but when he did it was in dashing tyle, that roused the cheers of the assemblage. He rolled up a cluster of 40, one of them a corking three-cushion carrom, that cut a big V as it traversed the green. Ives's score was 128 to Schaefer's 157. The "Wizard' made a three-cushion shot that was a sky-rocket, and by a break of 85 that was embellished by exquisite position play and nursery carroms, surpassed his previous tourney run of 79, and went around the second wire with a rush. The billiard lovers shouted their delight when these scores were displayed: Schaefer has elimpse of nursing in the middle of the table. He shot around his ther wire hearty, his score mounting to 318 to I

THE AFTERNOON GAME.

Time of game—Three hours.

THE AFFERNOON GAME.

Maurice Daly and George Sutton competed yesterday affernoon. Sutton got to the table first, and he was first to evolve a substantial run, ornatzenting his sixth inning with a cluster of 52, made mostly in one corner through the medium of the cusion kiss trick. To this Daly replied with a run of 22, in which there were some fine open carroms, Sutton resumed playing position shots with nicety and captured 25. They turned his first wire, the score standing: Sutton, 110; Daly, 59.

Haly woke up at this juncture and began to turn out fine billiards. They outshone and excreame Sutton's break. One of them was a masse that carried the player easily out of a dilemma where the balls were lined up badly. He kept the globes gliding about gracefully after that and neared Schaefer's high run of 79, but stopped short of it by 6 points in a sightly break of 73. They put him on the second wire and in the lead by a score of 133 to Sutton's 111. Sutton having made a dandy long draw on the rail in his nineteenth inning, made Ives and everybody else laugh by successfully essaying the "Young Napoleon's celebrated jump shot. He sent the cue ball up in the air and landed it plump between the two object balls on the rail. He made only four singles in the inning, though.

Soon Daly was again at work knocking out straight and cushing carrows.

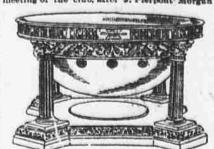

it plump between the two object balls on the rail. He made only four singles in the inning. though.

Soon Daly was again at work knocking out straight and cushion carroins in an interesting way. He notted 24, and turned his second wire with 204 to Sutton's 161. The play became quite ragged and uncertain for a long and tedious interval after that until Daly stirred things up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a swift carroin that raced thing up a bit with a twice around the table and made it take six cushions to count. Sutton crept around his second wire with 10 shots and saw this score go up: Sutton, 205; Daly, 260. Things dragged again, and Paly cleared his third wire with a break of 16. He had exactly 360 to his credit. There was an awful semashing of "duck eggs" for a while, too, and Daly got aggravated as the average went to simash. As soon as his ire rose, however, his billiards bettered, as often bappens, and he began to play cushion carroins that were bleasing to study. There were 32 of them in a bunch.

A long time after this Daly woke everybody up with a difficult bank shot that was perfect in execution and was hailed with plaudits. It was part of a run of 24 that contained many dainty carroins, and which served to fetch him round his last wire with a score of 412 to Sutton's 294. The latter somehow did not seem able to get the ivories started in any sort of style, and could do nothing to head off the veteran. Sutton got round the third wire with a run of 13 and a total of 307, and then everything was up so far as his chance of winning was concerned. Daly finished the game with a tiny break of 10, thus closing his participation in the tourney with a victory. He won by a score of 500 to Sutton's 317, leaving the latter to be last man in the tourney p

The loving cup presented to former Commo dore Edward M. Brown by the members of the New York Yacht Club, in recognition of his services as chief flag officer, has been finished, and the handsome piece of silver is a highly prized ornament in Commodore Brown's collection of trophies. The resolution embodying the deed of gift was offered at the first regular neeting of the club, after J. Pierpont Morgan tecame Commodore, by Secretary J. V. S. Oddie. The unan mous vote showed the popularity of the retiring Commodore.

The cup is in design a broad bowl resting on an ornamental square base of silver, coupled by four fluted Corlathian columns. Around the upper rim is raised letters and on an etched background is the following inscription:

Beneath this is a richly engraved border, in which decorative doublins plunging among sea shells form the basis of a very ornate design, which surmounts the base of the handsomely

This is the seventeenth consecutive bottle which it has been Quinn's fortune to drink at the well-known road house under the same conditions. It has been prize for which hundreds of drivers have contended for nearly a quarter of a century Quinn left his stables in 124th street, between Lenox and Seventh avenues, in a Brews ter cutter drawn by a big bay mare, at exactly 2:46 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The watch vas held by Frank Hardy of Larchmont, who is the Chief of the Fire Department of that village. He sat in the cutter with Quinn, The snow was thin and scattered in spots, but the mare, with suppery that to help her, ploughed along and stopped in front of Case's place at 3 o'clock. Gabe and his entire force of waiters were on the lookout for the first arrival, and great was the rejoicing when the face of John Quinn have in sight. The bottle was opened, and the successful competitors health was drunk seventeen times for his seventeenth vic-tory.

It appears that Marty McCus has made a better impression in San Francisco than was expected, and his stay there is likely to be extended. There must have been something the matter with the stewards while the second and third races were run. Maher, on Ten Spot, while winning easily in the second race, sat perfectly atill and permitted Continental to pass him and finish first. It was as glaring a case as that of Nacey, on Old Age, at the St. Asaph track, for which that boy was ruled off. Lamle permitted Musketeer to beat him a nose for the place in the third race without making an effort to stall bim off, but again the stewards said nothing.

the third race without making an effort to stall him off, but again the stewards said nothing. O'Connor rode the first two winners, and O'Leary piloted the last three.

After keeping the field at the post for half an hour in the opening race, Starter Pettingfil dropped the flag, with High Hoe left at the post and five others as good as left. Among them was the good thing, My Maryland, who was backed in the ring for thousands of dollars. In the closing race, after the horses had passed the furlong pole and all the boys except O'Leary, on Lansdale, had pulled up, he suddenly dropped the flag. This brought forth even more kicking than in the first race. A majority of the bettors said that it should have been declared "no race" because the horses had been beyond the furlong pole before the flag dropped. Waterman, a starter in this race, after finishing, ran away five miles. Summaries follow:

A NEW DESIGN OF SPROCKET FOR NEXT YEAR'S BICYCLE.

the Entional Assembly Meeting-Baid and Michael Matched to Hace Mile Ments. Another new design of sprocket, for which marvellous qualities are claimed, is to make its appearance next week on the 1898 model of a well-known wheel. The feature of this nev device is the small number of teeth on the forward sprocket. The sprocket will have the usual size relative to the rear one, and the gear, therefore, will be the same. Its eight teeth, however, will be distributed so far apart that the chain will engage with only four of at any one time. This idea has been tried with some apparent success by in dividual riders having mechanical notions of their own. As a matter of fact, one or two teeth do all the work in the ordinary sprocket, and the intervening teeth serve for thing except points for the links of the chain to bind against and create friction, when the chain is disengaging. Any rider whose wheel has been ridden a few hundred miles can satisfy imself of the truth of this. Let him place s little pressure on the pedal and haul the top stretch of the chain taut, then with the fingers manipulate the different links which are on the sprocket, working them up and down and sideways. He will readily discover that he can find some play in every one except the link on the tepmost tooth. That tooth is doing the work and the others are idlers. If all the teeth on which the chain rested at

he time were actually pulling, it is evident the links would be bearing so hard against their respective testh that no play could be felt in them. The reason for this is that after being used awhile the sprocket teeth and the chain blocks both become worn and the "pitch" is changed. With new sprockets and chains which are accurately cut to "pitch," that is, cut so that the sprocket teeth are precisely one inch apart, with the chain links corresponding, this condition does not exist. When the pitch is courate, each tooth and link engaging does its proportionate share of the work. Unfortunately few chains and sprockets are made as curate as they should be. In this lies one of the coluts of difference between fine and inferio bicycles. If in drilling the hole in the sidewhich the rivet passes, a variation of one-thou-sandth of an inch occurs, it will affect the pull of the chain and cause undue friction. If in making up chains a number of links are thus inaccurate, it often occurs in assembling them that the short or long links are brought together in a single chain. In such a case there is an accumulated error amounting to possibly five or six one-thousandths of an inch. In fitting over the teeth these links will bind, or else ride loosey before slipping back into place.

An expert mechanic of this city who has been naking some tests of chains with a micromete declares that a more accurate cutting of chains and sprockets is one of the most needed improve ments in wheels. In his experiments he says that he found from one to eight one-thousandth of an inch variation in links in the chains of makes a difference of 1 or 2 per cent, in the loss of draught through friction. The sad fact to reflect upon is that there is no material which does not wear, and that even when the chain and sprockets are perfectly machined from the finest material, the wear on the teeth will vary because of the uneven distribution of grit, and so, eventually, the pitch will be changed and undue friction will occur. The idea in reducing the number of teeth on the large sprocket is to save this frictional play on the teeth which are not pulling. A prominent lidea in reducing the number of teets on the large sprocket is to save this frictional play on the teeth which are not pulling. A prominent rider last summer tried the experiment of having every other tooth cut from a sprocket of the ordinary type, and he claims be improved his wheel. The danger in such a change is that the chain may ride off the sprocket altogether. For the benefit of rivers who have been in the habit of counting the teeth of the sprockets to ascertain the gear, and therefore may not be able to understand how teeth can be cut away without reducing the gear, it is worth while noting that the gear ratio is truly dependent upon the relative sizes of the sprockets, and the counting of teeth is only a method of convenience for ascertaining the relative sizes of the fact that on all modern sprockets the teeth are cut uniformly one inch apart.

In next week's six-day race several of the In next week's six-day race several of the riders will be mounted upon wheels fitted with various accessories which could be of actual benefit on the road only. Visitors need not be surprised to see some of the men laboring along on machines equipped with lamps and bells; spring frame devices to relieve the cobble-stone joit of the board track; puncture-proof tires, tough enough to resist railroad spikes; gear cases to keep off the mud; brakes to help on hills, and, possibly, even wind shields. An English wheel with a new style of internal gear will be ridden by one of the foreign riders. If the wheel is constructed like an alleged picture of it in an evening paper, the rider will move backward rather slowly when he pedals ahead rapidly.

One of the important matters to be decided at the next meeting of the National Assemby of the L. A. W. will be the admission of professionals to membership in the L. A. W. It is felt that the Sunday racing question will cut a very small figure in the deliberations of the delegates; but strong pressure will be brought to bear to induce the League to provide in some way for a classification of the cash prize riders. Some of the largest cycling clubs in the country have been compelled to withdraw from the League due to their admission of professional riders as members. The addition of leading amateur racing men to the professional ranks each year has compelled bleyde clubs to change their constitutions so as to grant membership to professionals, in order to retain riders in their ranks who they feel are fully qualified to become members. Strong arguments sill be advanced at the League meeting in favor of the "pros." Heputable wheelmen who race for cash, it is claimed, are entitled to recognition, and the sentiment seems to favor them in the plea for classification.

Bicycle riders of the leading branches of the Y. M. C. A. throughout the country are agitated over the question of the propriety of riding on sunday. The practice is now so widespread that opposition to the custom has a very small following. The Harlem branch has passed the following:

*Resolved, That the Committee of Management of the Harlem branch, Young Men's Christian Association, recommend to the members of the branch that they refrain from bicycle riding for amusement on Sunday.

Sunday.

The local branches have a strong bicycle following, and, while official runs and special features of such character are not recognized, it is felt that a small element regard bicycle riding as unchristianlike.

The Century Cycling Club of Maryland closed its record books on Nov. 30. Milton A. Frazier scored sixty-nine centuries for the season, earning the gold medal presented to the member participanting in the greatest number of such runs. Miss Maud Pitcher led the women's division with eight runs to her credit. The record of the leaders is as follows:

M. H. Frazier, 59; S. M. Warns, 50; H. Smith, 43; W. W. Clayton, 36; E. Decker, 34; J. A. Cunningham, 26; C. B. Halk, 25; W. H. Powell, 25; E. C. Davis, 18; F. L. Reisinger, 13; J. R. Dunlap, 12; W. Arrangements have been made for a meeting between E. C. Bald and Jimmy Michael in a series of short-distance races before Jan. 1. The men have agreed to ride three one-mile paced races, the winner of two to be declared the victor. Four pacing crews will be allowed to each man. Bald has never met Michael in each man. Bald has never met Michael in either a match or competition, and opinions are divided as to who is the faster rider. Bald's specialty is short-distance racing, and his friends feel confident that he can defeat the Welshman. It is likely that the men will meet in this city.

One of the largest whist gatherings of the season was held at the Union League Club, Brooklyn, on Thursday night, the players being the guests of the Long Island Women's Club. The star of the evening was Miss Mabel Whiton,

The star of the evening was Miss Mabel Whiton, who repeated her performance of Tuesday by making 15 plus, this time with Mr. Powell for a partner. Miss E. Gledhill and Mr. Fowler came next, with 11 plus.

There may be no game for the A, W. L. trophy on Monday, as the Buffalo Whist Club has decided not to send a team. The Western players raised a great fuss because so many Eastern clubs challenged for this trophy, which they thought should be left to be played for by Western clubs until January. Out of a list of twenty challengers only two Western clubs have toed the scratch, whereas not a single Eastern club has failed to come to time.

MORE CANADIAN MILITIA. A Biffe Corps Proposed for Service in Southern British Columbia

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.-The Canadian Militia Dopartment is considering a scheme for the organization of rifle corps, as part of the Daminion active militia force, to be stationed in southern active militia force, to be stationed in southern British Columbia, near the international boundary. The organization of this new permanent force is for the ostensible purpose of local service in the mining districts. It is stated that at present, if any trouble should occur in any of the mining camps of the Kootensy, no military force is available for the aid of the civil authorities in maintaining law and order there. As the region about the Kootensy is of a mountainous character, a special uniform for the proposed rifle corps will be provided. The men will be armed with Lee-Enfield rifles, The force will be recruited from among the British subjects at Kamloops, Sandon, Nelson, Rossland, and other points.
